SPECIAL EDITION

THE DIG

SPECIAL EDITION

11/05/2026

UNUSUAL DISCOVERIES FOUND IN LONDON DIG

Strange discoveries unearthed at a recent London dig site suggest there may be a deeper meaning intentionally obscured. A vellum scroll, sealed in wax and housed within a ceremonial tube, appears to connect the otherwise disparate collection of objects.

Most curious is the wide range of apparent ages among the buried items. Some seem centuries old, while others are significantly more modern. Archaeologists have also noted the unusually deliberate placement of each object within The Dig site and wonder whether together, they lead somewhere?

SUNKEN WRECKAGE DISCOVERED

An specialist team of divers recently discovered part of a shipwreck on the ocean floor. Whilst much of the ship has *rot*ted away over time, it is believed that the unusual arrangement and markings on planks may hold a clue as to their original purpose.

In a brief statement made four days ago, the Royal Institute confirmed the remains appear genuine, noting that the planks were all originally 4x3s carved from a single source, similar to those found at the London Dig.

FINDINGS IN THE SOIL - GEOPHYSICS OF LOCAL 'HILL'

